How can art and culture spark crucial conversations about inclusion and propaganda using the works of local artists, curators and organizers? A series of art and cultural happenings, ReFrame: Miami Beach explores the topic of inclusion by reimagining Memorial Day Weekend on Miami Beach for locals and visitors.

The City of Miami Beach, in partnership with the ReFrame: Miami Beach curatorial team, Octavia Yearwood and Jared McGriff, invites you to the opening reception and media preview on Friday, May 24 from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. at the Standard Hotel. Activating both public and digital spaces, the five-day long festival launches on Thursday, May 23 with the opening of the exhibition I See You, Too at 737 Lincoln Road. Mayor Dan Gelber and members of the City Commission alongside festival curators, participating artists and representatives from the city's cultural anchors, including Miami New Drama, FIU-Miami Beach Urban Studios and The Bass, will be in attendance and available for on-site interviews.
